2.a – Grammar : Les articles.

✓ L'article the ##### Comparez :

☞ I'm very fond of books (1a)

☞ He likes coffee a lot (2a)

The books I bought yesterday are very interesting (1b)

The coffee he gave us was excellent (2b)

L'article the ne s'emploie généralement pas devant des dénombrables pluriels (1a) et les indénombrables (2a) quand on exprime des généralités. La présence de the en (1b) se justifie par la proposition [ I bought yesterday ] qui détermine le sens de ' books' et la présence de the en (2 b) se justifie par [ he gave us] qui précise le sens de 'coffee'.

De même dans 'This is the Paris of my youth', l'article the devant Paris ne se justifie que par le complément [ my youth ] introduit par of.

☛ On dira the United States (is), the United Kingdom mais Ø America, Ø Great-Britain etc.

✓ L'article a/an

A la différence du français, l'anglais utilise a/an devant les noms de métiers (she is a teacher), les distributifs (she comes once a week) et après les prépositions (she went out without an umbrella).

Retenez que l'article a/an ne s'emploie pas devant les indénombrables (Ø time is money) à l'exception de What a pity ! , What a shame !. On ne dira donc pas ~~a furniture~~ (un meuble) mais a piece of furniture. De même que l'on ne dira pas ~~few furniture~~ mais much furniture. On peut en revanche utiliser the lorsque l'indénombrable est déterminé (the furniture I bought is made of solid wood).

☛ aux indénombrables pluriels ! Ces substantifs ont toujours une forme de pluriel, mais il n'est pas possible de les dénombrer. (On peut parfois, selon les noms plus ou moins les quantifier). On pourra donc dire : She was wearing nice clothes mais pas ~~a nice clothe~~. Au nombre de ces substantifs, il y a : belongings, customs, damages, goods, holidays, looks etc.

☛ aux collectifs ! Ce sont des noms dénombrables (army, company, crew, couple, family, firm, government, group, press, staff, team etc.) qui peuvent s'accorder soit au singulier, si l'on considère le groupe dans son unité, soit au pluriel si l'on veut insister sur les membres qui constituent ce groupe.

Retenez : ☞ The government, which is elected (l'institution) by a simple majority, is....

☞ The government , who are hoping (membres du gouvernement) to curb taxes soon,....

☛ aux collectifs obligatoires !!! Ce sont des noms (cattle, people, police etc.) qui permettent le dénombrement mais l'accord du verbe se fait au pluriel.

☞ The police are looking for a fair-haired man in his teens.

§1 The United States is not a Welfare State as Britain has been since the Beveridge Report. The British State commits to taking care of the subjects "from the cradle to the grave". The National Health Service (NHS), however, is in dire straits and the successive cabinets have both fueled huge amounts of money to support it and endeavored to reform it. As a result a two-tier system has emerged: the rich can afford private medical practice while the poor have to suffer from long waits to get treated or operated.

The number of Americans without health insurance increased from 44.8 million (15.3%) in 2005 to 47 million in 2006 (15.8%). And only half of the American population is covered by employment-based health insurance. Others, although they work, have no coverage for themselves and their families. They are too well-off to qualify for the federal programme of Medicaid, and are too underprivileged to afford a private insurance: they are the "working poor". Medicaid was created to help to poorest, while Medicare was designed for the elderly who often have modest pensions. Along with food stamps for the needy, they are inherited from the Great Society Programme implemented by President Lyndon B. Johnson and his "war on poverty" in the 1960s. They have been significantly cut, however, under Reagan and Clinton. In the spirit of American individualism, people should be responsible for themselves and not live on welfare benefits and rely on relief only.

§2 Health is also a bone of contention in the U.S as far as research is concerned. The current experiments on the cloning on stem cells have gathered much interest and debate. Genetic engineering could allow to cure degenerative diseases such as cancer by cloning the damaged cells. Indeed therapeutic cloning is concerned with exploiting the potential of stem cells that are said to replace any kind of cell. They are obtained, however, from embryos, and this has raised an outcry in American society. In the name of the respect of life, the Bush administration has thus banned federal grants for such a research. One should remember that therapeutic cloning is not reproductive cloning (witness the infamous sheep Dolly) and finding new medical remedies does not amount to playing Frankenstein and tinkering with DNA. The same debate goes for Genetically Modified Organism (GMO): are they likely to improve crops for the most desperate in the world or profits for great companies? Do they bring along solutions or new dangers?
